The Benefits of Using Photoshop Elements If you're looking for a simple and easy to use photo editor to get your first taste of the program, Adobe Photoshop Elements is a great tool for beginners. It's easy to follow along with the online tutorials and photo editing tools help you get started with a variety of effects. Image Stabilization One of the common traits among photographers is a shaky or blurry photo. Gaze-Stealing is a common way to blur photos. This effect is caused by making your camera active in a way that allows it to capture your moment without you having to focus on it. These elements can include moving cars, jostling crowds, and fast-moving objects. Gaze-steal can be reduced by using the Stabilization tool in Photoshop Elements. Image-Finishing Features The Photoshop Elements Photo Editor has an array of image-finishing tools to fix common issues such as red eye, blurry effects, over and underexposure, and red or yellow color cast. Add-ons and Extensions Adobe Photoshop Elements has a powerful toolbox of plug-ins and extensions that help users create and output high-quality graphics for use in other programs. People who have used Photoshop Elements in the past may recognize the names of some of these extensions and add-ons. They have similar tools to provide new capabilities with a simple plug-in or extension. Free Software Photoshop Elements has some features that require paid software to use. These include GIMP, a bitmap image editor for PCs and Macs. The program is a complete replacement for Windows' standard image editor, Paintbrush. While it has many of the same features as Photoshop, GIMP is free and an open-source program. Although Adobe Photoshop does not come with free software, it has plenty of other plug-ins and extensions that allow you to use the program for free. Many users opt to use GIMP instead of Photoshop. MISSISSAUGA, Ont. -- An Ontario family has sold its farm in order to preserve it, because it needs to pay the mortgage on time. The father of the family took out a second mortgage of $150,000 with the proceeds, which are considered a down payment, on the farm owned by his family for three generations in Merrimac. His family has decided to sell because it needs the money to meet mortgage payments, but will be happy to have the farm to live on as a family for generations to come, said the father. "This is the second generation, my own children, that we have decided we need to sell and become city dwellers and live in the city," he said. The family would have happily stayed on the farm and will be saddened to leave the land that belongs to their ancestors, he said. "When you have your head down working all day and there's nothing to do, come home and you're a family and you play games and you have fun on the farm, it's a whole different ballgame." But there was no way he could make the money needed to make the mortgage payments, he said. The family farm was profitable at $57,000. The payments range between $30,000 and $35,000. "I'm actually living on my credit cards," he said. "I'm afraid in the coming week I won't be able to pay the mortgage. The mortgage is due on the first. I'm behind, it's a really, really tight time frame." He wants to sell now before the real estate market values come down too much. There was a view of the family farm that they would cherish for generations, he said. "The view on the property that we've had for generations is coming to an end in the near future," he said. "My children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren will have this view as they grow up and raise their families." He's hoping to find a smaller property near Merrimac that will be suitable for a family farm with the help of a land buyer he found. "Now that we're making the sale, we're hoping to find a smaller farm similar to what we have so we can stay on there." He said the family farm will help pay for the addition of a $9,000 wheelchair lift that will make it easier
