ZC2002_USB3 2 days ago From: Q: Best Practice to generate select elements using string representation of dates? I am sending an XML message to a third party system. This third party system creates a dataset in my database This dataset needs to be sent as xml. In the XML, I need to include a columns that need to be a list of dates A good example is a list of closing dates for dealers that will need to be processed. I read about Json formatting to use with DateTime in the output and I am thinking of using JsonWriter to generate a json string representation of the DateTime and convert it into an xml element. I am not sure which one is the best way to do this. Question What is the best way to generate dates as a string in a select element? using DateTime or dateFormat or other? Or is there something else to do? A: Basically, the DateTime type is used for representing date and time in object-oriented programming (and windows), JsonWriter is used for generating JSON string. 1. The best way to write a string is to use string.Format. 2. A list of dates can be best represented in XML using the XElement class. XElement xdateList = new XElement("DateList", new XElement("Date", DateTime.Now.ToShortDateString())); Laparoscopic Roux-en Y gastric bypass: a series of patients and technique.
