Scanning, animation and rendering tools are used in the development of this brand-new technology, which has a top tier animation model, plus data-driven motion on ball and pitch physics. A “first-person view” is integrated into the game, and the viewing angle allows the user to see what the players can see as they walk around the pitch. FIFA 22 also introduces a new “Ball Cam,” which tracks the ball and shows where it will go while also using data from the top-tier animation and motion capture model. The “Ball Cam” also can be used as a guide to help players make accurate passes to teammates, and it can be unlocked by playing the game. The cover athlete for FIFA 22 is superstar Cristiano Ronaldo, who will be featured prominently in the game. Ronaldo has the ability to use his right or left foot to touch the ball, as well as being able to make passes, crosses and shots from his own half of the field. “As soon as I got the call, I was buzzing,” Ronaldo said. “To be able to create a new experience for so many fans, and I’ve always been a fan of football. I’ve played the game since I was a kid and I’ve been to every single World Cup since my first appearance. “I think I’m going to give the fans something new to see and I hope they love it.” One of the features that Ronaldo is most excited about is “Offsides,” which uses technology he helped develop and which will become a part of the Real Madrid squad in FIFA 18. Ronaldo said: “Offsides is one of the most exciting things in FIFA that I have been able to develop. “It will now be possible to be marked offsides very early, making it a very important thing for the game to control. “It will not only help the teams to play fair, but they will also be able to have fun and enjoy the game more. “I’m very proud of what we have been able to achieve in developing and working with FIFA to make this happen, and I hope it’s a great football experience for players around the
