Starfinder roleplaying game puts the spotlight on the Explorer class as the heroes of the Pathfinder universe prepare to explore the stars. The danger of becoming lost between stars is a real one. When the stars go out, you go dark, your ship is your tomb. Along for the ride is a diverse cast of unforgettable characters, from extraordinary humans and other highly-advanced, spacefaring races to alien beings with curious, innovative societies. What you do matters, because the stars are no longer the final frontier. For the first time, you could be the one who ventures beyond the stars. So about twenty years back I had this call from a friend of mine who had gotten hooked on the first Starfinder game. I was a DM and had done a pretty good job of running his campaign. So after one of those run-down years (I still have my notes) I asked if he wanted to do something different. He said "Yeah, I don't want to play any more" haha. Now I had actually gone through a run-down period myself, and I had gotten a bit off my original game (I'd been the DM on-and-off for a few years by this point) and there were a lot of shortcomings. But I really didn't want to have the two of us get off on a bad note. So I set to work on a new one. I didn't want to put a whole new campaign together, so when I sat down I had a small group of five of friends that he didn't know. I moved the game to the present day, and we kicked around some ideas. So on it was, Starfinder Apocalypse had begun. I think we all had pretty good ideas for the campaign going forward (maybe not the craziest concepts, but several good ideas). Then one of the guys who was about to graduate college mentioned he was going to be taking a large number of astronomy and astronomy related courses for his degree. He was looking into "exploring the galaxy" as a career, and the stars were definitely a part of that. I put some of my old notes together and we started playing. It turned out pretty well. He liked the game enough that when he started grad school he invited the people he was close to in the group, and me. Pretty soon the other five were there too. As you can imagine, we had a lot of fun. I had some fun with the setting, and some fun with a few of the stats. There's will arrive on 20th June and here are some details to help you get ready for the boss. We have a few tips to help you get to the front of the queue, and also a summary of the loot tables, including a detailed list of the legendary ring. Enjoy. We will start with an introduction to the mobs that you will face in the expansion - Mobs and their important traits - before we look at the more common items you will find with these dudes. If you see something you like just follow the links to see all the details. If you have any questions, shout at us and we will answer them. For example - please ask us about how to get to the front of the line. Druid of the Moon Stone Useful beast fauna of the plains and swamp with palebeast like abilities. Rollagons - Hanging low in the sky, in a looping descent towards the Avarian, they leave a trail of flames to burn the living out of people. On top of this they can hit each other with multiple hits of the claw held over their heads. Traumazord - Grimm's lesser blade version. It's seldom seen and hard to hit, should give you a few seconds of paralysis during their attack and can be avoided by jumping. gjrbhlcllllgcjgfkmgclgfkigh Deathclaws - Slower than a normal Deathclaw, there is no circling animation so they have to run right to you. They can slow themselves down as they flail around. They can also climb and hide in the grass. They usually hang around in groups of 3-4, with larger ones being the boss. Some of them have a rage skill. Azurespine - Lightweight, very fast and silent. The most common melee attacker. They can jump a lot, even to short distances. They mostly hang around in groups of three, and have an AoE ability. Crimson Chimera - This melee attacker is the most defensive and hard hitting. They'll keep one hand held to attack, and the other to heal. They're also very fast. They can also jump and will use their secondary weapon in turn. Azer - Short winded, with a huge spike in the front of its back. It will try to pin you to the ground. It has a special ability that, if the fight is still going, can
